and project facilitator Sue Boyce-Cormier, will compete nationally against other regional winners in kindergarten through third grade. Another team from W.G. Mallett School earned an honorable mention with their “Hive Tracker” project focusing on bees.

Congratulations to both teams! Best of luck to Lucinda, Ronnie, and Clair in the final phase of the competition!

Our school meals are top-notch

RSU 9 continues to see increased student participation in our school meals programs. For the month of March, a daily average of 2,276 meals were served across the district; we are up 295 meals per day from the start of school last fall.

Favorable meal reimbursement rates have allowed us to replace old kitchen equipment using revenue from the school nutrition program instead of these costs being added to the local budget. Recent replacements include a two-door refrigerator at Cascade Brook School and a convection oven at Mt. Blue Middle School.

Hats off to Chef Andy and our team of school nutrition heroes working hard to supply meals each and every day to our students!

Students connecting in the community

Forestry and Woodharvesting Program students from Foster Career and Technical Education Center have been very busy this spring. As reported in the Daily Bulldog, the program is collaborating with the town of Chesterville to provide zero-cost forest management services to some town properties.

Our students have also collaborated with the Mt. Blue Garden Club and Farmington Historical Society as they work to restore and maintain the park that houses the memorial arch dedicated to Franklin County veterans of World War One.

These are great examples of RSU 9 community partnerships in action. Special thanks go to the Town of Chesterville, Mt. Blue Garden Club, and Farmington Historical Society for offering these real-world learning experiences to our students!
